

MARKED LIST

The Marked List page lists the bibliographic records you have selected from the Search Results page or the Full Record page during your current session. It allows you to create a list of records selected from searches in the current session, view the full record, email, print or download the list, remove records from your list, or save records to My Archive if you want to keep a record beyond the current session. Note that records will only remain on the Marked List page for the duration of the current session.

1. As you conduct your search, click the Add to Marked List box for each source you would like to keep or further research.
2. To view your Marked List selections, click the Marked List link located on the right side of the Search page.

1. Author, title: Hodges, Hugh Start-Over, Possession Rites, and Healing Rituals in the Poetry of Lorna Goodison

Reference: Research in African Literatures, 36:2 (Summer 2005), p. 19-32

Abstract: For much of the last twenty years, Lorna Goodison's poetry has been concerned with finding or performing ceremonies that will both commemorate the past and engender new possibilities for the future. Drawing on the language and symbolism of Pocomania, Revivalism, Pentecostalism, and Rastafarianism, as well as Jamaican folk songs and stories, these poems explore Goodison's belief in the power of language to actually do things: to cleanse, heal, and strengthen. In "I Am Becoming My Mother," "Heartease," and "To Us All Flowers Are Roses," Goodison takes on the roles of priestess and prophet to explore the public function of poetry as healing rite. They are roles that often entail personal suffering. In her more recent collections, "Turn Thanks" and "Travelling Mercies," she turns her attention to more private rituals—those daily rites and ceremonies that perform "local miracles" and give one the strength to endure and start over. In the process Goodison seems to have found her way to "Heartease."

GUIDE

THE BLACK STUDIES CENTER PROVIDES EASY ACCESS TO THESE HARD-TO-FIND KEY RESOURCES IN SCHOMBURG STUDIES ON THE BLACK EXPERIENCE™, THE CHICAGO DEFENDER, AND THE INTERNATIONAL INDEX TO BLACK PERIODICALS™. RESEARCHING ESSAYS, PERIODICALS, NEWSPAPERS, DISSERTATIONS, MULTIMEDIA, AND MORE IS SIMPLE AND QUICK WHEN YOU USE THIS GUIDE'S TIPS.

SEARCH PAGE

1. Click on Search in the menu bar to go to the Search page.
2. Type your search term (word or phrase) into the keyword search box. All searches are case-insensitive, so you don't have to know whether a word should be capitalized or not. For example, there is no difference between Alabama, alabama or aLabama. Also, when you have selected to search the Schomburg Studies on the Black Experience database, the Search automatically searches "related meanings," which will find records that contain your search term plus records containing words that are similar in meaning. For example, the word doctor will display records containing "Dr", "surgeon", and "physician" as well as "doctor."
3. Optionally, you may search all BSC databases by title, author, or publication year. You can even search a specific month within a year by putting the three letter month abbreviation (such as Jan or Feb) in the keyword field and inserting the year of interest in both the From and To boxes.
4. You may also search within specific content types by selecting an individual database from the box on the right side of the screen. By default, BSC searches all content types.

CHANGING SORT ORDER

The results are initially displayed in sections, by content type (essays, resources, timeline, multimedia, journals, and newspapers).

1. Timeline and newspaper results can be re-sorted. Click on the More Timelines or More Newspapers link at the bottom of these respective sections.
2. Choose one of the "Change sort order to" options from the drop-down list near the top of the expanded timeline or newspaper links page.
3. Click the Sort button to sort your results.
