

ProQuest Newsstand

Tailor Your Newspaper Database to Your Researchers

Nobody knows the news needs of your library users like you do. With ProQuest Newsstand, you create an online database that best meets those needs.

ProQuest Newsstand is the online gateway to over 850 newspapers, including over 575 full-text titles, and many with backfiles dating back to the 1980s and 1990s. Choose from international, national, and regional newspaper bundles, as well as individual titles, to create a reference resource that enables your users to compare and contrast event coverage, evaluate how far-away happenings will affect them at home, or simply remain current on today's events.

To create the perfect database to satisfy your users' need for news, start here ... with ProQuest.

Premium Titles

ProQuest Newsstand makes available the key full-text titles your researchers need and want:

U.S. title examples

- The New York Times (1980-current)
- Los Angeles Times (1985-current), exclusively available through ProQuest
- The Wall Street Journal (1984-current), co-exclusively available through ProQuest and Dow Jones's Factiva.com™
- Washington Post (1987-current)
- Chicago Tribune (1985-current)
- USA Today (1987-current)
- 85 full-text local and regional Gannett newspapers, exclusively available through ProQuest

International title examples

- The Guardian (1990-current)
- The Globe and Mail (Toronto) (1977-current)
- The Hindu (1996-current)
- Jerusalem Post (1988-current)
- El Pais (Madrid) (2008-current)
- South China Morning Post (1995-current)

Regional bundle examples

- Canadian Newsstand—Almost 240 full-text titles from across the country
- Latin American Newsstand—More than 40 Spanish and Portuguese newspapers
- U.S. Hispanic Newsstand—Almost 50 Hispanic titles published in the U.S.
- Middle East Newsstand—More than 30 newspapers in English and French from the Arab World, Israel, Southwest Asia, and surrounding countries
- Australia & New Zealand Newsstand—More than 65 key titles, including national newspapers from Fairfax, News Ltd., and ABC, along with leading regional and local sources

For a complete list of available titles visit www.proquest.com.

Technology That Supports Your Users and Your Library

Both novice and professional researchers will find ProQuest Newsstand easy to use, with its basic and advanced search options. Further, they can use the “My Research” summary feature to track recent searches, save articles, email documents, create a bibliography, export citations, and even create Web pages. And, to learn the latest news when it happens, your users can set up email alerts and RSS feeds.

ProQuest Newsstand is cross-searchable with other resources you may already subscribe to that reside on the ProQuest platform, such as ABI/INFORM®, the gold standard in business research databases. For even greater accessibility to premium content, ProQuest Newsstand provides Shibboleth® support and OpenURL linking.

Also Available

ProQuest offers a variety of other types of news resources to meet the specific needs of your library, including the following:

ProQuest Historical Newspapers™: More than 30 full-image U.S., international, and black newspapers, from their first issues forward, with coverage from 1764 to 2008

ProQuest Digital Microfilm™: A new solution from ProQuest that provides cover-to-cover, full-image browsing of selected newspaper titles in microfilm in an online environment

Library PressDisplay: Over 1,000 of today’s full-image newspapers online, from 84 countries in 40 languages, with sophisticated digital tools to enhance the reading experience

Critical Mention iTV: A real-time broadcast news online search engine that includes network, cable, and radio stations from around the world

FREE TRIAL

To sign up for a free ProQuest Newsstand trial or training session, call 800-521-0600, ext. 3344; email pqsales@proquest.com; or visit www.proquest.com.

